Pope FRANCIS at FATIMA—100 Years Saints Lucia, Francisco and Jacinta

The Fatima apparitions happened 100 years ago. They contain a message that's both relevant and needed in the world today. What Our Lady offered during her apparitions is a message "that deals with mankind as mankind, not only Christians or believers," and because of this, it "has an extraordinary authority" in the world today. On May 13, 1917, the Virgin Mary appeared to three shepherd children – Lucia, Francisco, and Jacinta – in a field while they were tending their family's sheep. In her message to the children, Mary brought with her requests for conversion, prayer (particularly the recitation of the rosary), sacrifices on behalf of sinners, and a three-part secret regarding the fate of the world. Although there are many different elements to the requests made by Our Lady, her appeals can be summed up in four key themes. Faith, Conversion, Peace and Hope.

Faith

Her appeal in this regard "is very current because, unfortunately, we live in a world in which the faith is falling. Unbelief is growing, and the Catholic faith, the faith of the Gospels, is increasingly decreasing. We are walking toward a pagan world, people have an abstract faith, but the Gospel is not a part of their concrete lives. Man today needs faith, to believe in something; to believe in God, who is our common father, to believe in our brothers, we are all children of the same Father, we are all brothers.

Conversion

The Madonna spoke many times to the shepherds about the need for man to convert ... to increasingly draw nearer to God, and so to always draw nearer to our brothers and sisters. Throughout her six appearances Mary encouraged them to pray the rosary daily and to offer sacrifices in reparation for sins. In all of her apparitions Mary consistently insisted "on the need for man, especially today, to increasingly draw nearer to his origin, to God."

Peace

Mary spoke to the children about peace often and urged them to pray for peace, noting that her request came as the global armies were embroiled in World War I. Our Lady's message was to "do penance, ask for peace, because otherwise man will disappear, as is evident in the vision the children had of hell and the souls who are anguishing there. Man today needs many things, but especially peace, with himself and others."

Hope

"Many people today lack many things, but lack one above all: hope. If man today doesn't have hope, he lives a life without a future, without the hope of a future. And if a person doesn't have hope in the future – whether in his own life or in his relationships with others – then what life is this? Hope is fundamental for man, there is no sense in life if it doesn't have a destination that it must reach." So what Mary asks for from the men of today, and "what God demands of men today, is a deep faith, a hope, which is greatly lacking – so we will have peace, which we need to live a dignified life.

The message of Fatima ought to be lived not just individually, but "as a human community, explaining that the three children were able to respond to Our Lady's appeals with "an extraordinarily unique, unrepeatable mission." Even though they were young children, they were able to communicate and spread Mary's message to the entire world with their sacrifices and prayers, adding that the centenary of the apparitions, coupled with the canonization of Francisco and Jacinta, "does nothing but underline this importance."

AN EQUAL RIGHT TO LIFE

Some politicians, along with international abortion campaigners, want to repeal the 8th Amendment so they can legalise unlimited abortion.

What is the 8th Amendment?

The 8th Amendment of the Irish Constitution was approved by a huge majority of the Irish people in 1983. It recognises that there are two human lives involved in a pregnancy, and protects and safeguards the life of BOTH mother and baby. Top legal experts have said that repealing the 8th Amendment would result in abortion on demand, and it would mean that the right to life of preborn children would not be protected. That's not what the majority of Irish people want. Our constitution says that both mother and baby have a right to life, and should be protected. Abortion has no place in a modern society.
