St. MARGARETS - IGNORANCE

It is possible for the moral conscience to be in ignorance and therefore to make false erroneous judgements about acts which are about to be or already have been carried out. But it is not enough to say "my conscience is clear". We are responsible for educating our conscience, for taking the time and trouble to inform ourselves about right and wrong. We need also to understand that our conscience may be in ignorance because it has become dulled simply by the habits of sin. A lively and informed conscience is a gateway to God. Not only can we learn to hear Gods voice within us, we also open ourselves to his love and his mercy. Key to a good conscience is learning to examine our lives.
